Chapter 2 by Fanwizard

I stared at the screen.
I wanted to be that well liked and well known writer, and wanted my stories to be read.
But compared to my progress right now, I might as well have blended into the background as one of those writers who was right in between a nobody and a somebody.
I hit the back button, watching the letters vanish from the screen and start again.

(Backspace).

What did I have to say?

Nothing.

I didn't have anything left to say anymore.
